Program Description

This one day seminar will provide important and useful information to overcome the challenges we face when working with the diverse populations in Southern California.

We will discuss concerns of African American mothers and methods for addressing them to support and protect breastfeeding.

We will review data on breastfeeding among foreign and US born Latina women. The effects of acculturation, barriers to exclusive breastfeeding and specific cultural beliefs that impact exclusive breastfeeding in foreign and US born Latina women will be discussed.

The concept of Perceived Insufficient Milk Supply (PIMS) will be described and we will identify how PIMS affects exclusive and any breastfeeding among Latina mothers.

We will gain insights into cultural beliefs related to breastfeeding among Asian American mothers. We will discuss jaundice in Asian infants.

Teens are a special group of people and are often overlooked as a ‘cultural group’. We will look at their needs and describe successful interventions to support their parenting skills, including breastfeeding.
